The Officials Refuse a Petition to Name the Public quare After the General-Decrees Universal Suffrage and Other Privileges to the Antilles - Insurgents Pardoned. Increase of Rations for the Reconcentrados to be Made

Palma, Island of Majorca, November 26.-This town and its port are decorated today in honor of General Weyler, who was born here. Preparations have been made to give the general a public banquet after his arrival here from Barcelona.

The municipality of Palma, however, has refused the request made by the conservatives, carlists and republicans, to rename the square in front of the town hall and call it Weyler square.

Madrid, November 25.-The Official Gazette publishes this morning (Friday) two decrees signed by the queen regent and by Senor Sagasta, the premier. The first decree applies to the Antilles the laws inscribed in the first chapter of the Spanish constitution, with a guarantee of the application of the general laws.

The second decree extends to the Antilles the universal suffrage law of 1890. According to the law of June 26th, 1890, the electoral qualification was held by ail male Spaniards 25 years of age, who enjoy all civil rights and have been citizens of a municipality for at least two years. Havana, November 25.-Rear Admiral Vicente Manterola arrived today from Spain and took charge of the admiralty office. With him came also 300 soldiers and 270 seamen.

General Blanco has authorized the transfer of the bodies of Gustavo Ariza and Fernandez Galvez Posada, to the private burial ground of the Arizonas family.

Senor Barsrera, former chief of police, now in Spain, has been summoned by the governor general to attend the inquiry into the circumstances under which Senor Galvez, the Portuguese consul, and his son, met their death on the Santo Venia road while going to join the insurgents. From today there will be a daily distribution of 2,000 rations, instead of 1,000 among the reconcentrados at Matanzas, and tomorrow an infirmary battalion will be organized.

Pardons have been extended to sixtynine persons "guilty of forcible resistance," in various localities of the island. Among these are ten women and also twenty-six subjects of foreign governments. The list includes Mrs. Clemencia Arando, Matilde Ferrer, Maria Teresa, Rosalia Garcia, Emilia Cordoba, Pantaleona and Inocencia Aragujo.

Major Roberts Echarte and Captain Ygnacio Echarte, the latter a brother-inlaw of General Julio Sanguilly, have formally surrendered in the province of Matanzas.

The governor of Santa Clara province and the mayor of the city of Santa Clara having advised the government that the food which is being supplied to the troops is of very inferior quality, the government, according to the official account, has issued stringent orders correcting the abuses of supply, and the troops will be supplied with good rations in the future. The government has ordered a regular distribution of rations to the reconcentrados at Sagua la Grande,

Thanksgiving in London

London, November 25.—Over 300 'American men and women and a few English persons celebrated Thanksgiving day by a dinner at the Hotel Cecil tonight. The party included John Hay, the United States ambassador and his wife and daughter: Henry White, secretary of the United States embassy; J. R. Carter, second secreatry of the embassy; Lord Stratecona and Mount Royal, of Canada; Archdeacon Sinclair, Louis Astor Chanler and William Fuich, United States minister to Uruguay. The health of Queen Victoria was proposed by the chairman, who read a letter dated Windsor Castle from Sir Arthur Bigge, private secretary to her majesty, expresing the queen's thanks for the beautifully illumiated address of congratulation she received from that body.

When the health of Ambassador Hay was proposed he responded with a bright speech. In closing he said: "The great body of the people of the two countries are friends. We are the fortunate heirs to English law and liberty, which both nations respect."

Hon. Sir John Garell Barnes, justice of the high court of justice, proposed the health of Ambassador Hay, dwelling upon the great friendliness that he believed exists between England and the United States and saying: "If the two countries will only put their backs together they can rule the destinies of the world."

A Probable New Party It is said that populist leaders are much concerned at the aggressive character of the socialist labor movement. They are afraid it will develop into a separate political party and practically destroy the populist organization by drawing heavily on its forces. There is good reason for this uneasiness. The socialist element of the people's party is the radical, restless element. It will not be satisfied with any platform which does not declare specifically for socialism of

THE LATE MR. D. G. WORTH

Remarks of Iredell Meares, Esq., at the Memorial Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday Afternoon

Among those who made remarks at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday afternoon, called to take action about the death of Mr. Signed by the spanish Queen, Extending David G. Worth, was Iredell Meares, Esq. Mr. Meares said:

I would like to add to the tributes being paid to the honored dead this incident which has been recalled to me while listening to the addresses delivered. I was in a town in South Carolina more than a year ago. A number of gentlemen were engaged in a business consultation and the name of the firm of Worth & Worth was mentioned. One of those gentlemen was a prominent lawyer of South Carolina. He turned to me and remarked that he did not know the members of that firm personally; that he had never seen a member of it, but he had been much impressed for many years with the fact that he had never known a man who had ever dealt with this firm who did not feel the most complete confidence in it, and, more than that, to have a kindly regard for its members. He had known men who in business had been obliged to surrender their property in order to meet their obligations to the firm, some of them his clients, and he had been struck with how kindly the firm dealt with them and how the men themselves felt, even in their misfortune, that they had not been unkindly or ungenerously treated.

We know that the deceased was largely instrumental in establishing the policy of that firm. It seems to me that the key-note of his character lay in his willingness, his desire, in his individual dealings not only to do exact justice, but to do it kindly and gently. And this morning when witnessing the beautiful ceremonies at his church, I recalled reading a recent book of a distinguished member of his own religious body in which is analyzed "The Mind of the Master." The writer spoke of the fact that Christ in His work seemed to deal not with the masses, but rather to influence the individuals. He had never failed to reach individuals. He did not succeed with the masses. The book dwelt then upon the profound necessity of the Several sugar estates near San Fernan- cultivation of individualism, taking this as the Master's method, and, in developing the Christian spirit of the individual, he trusted the sweet spirit of that development to be transfused into the masses. The success of Mr. Worth was not the success of a brilliant hero. It was not the success of the statesman who has dealt with great state questions. It was not the success of the publicist who has dealt with the great problems of finance and economics. He did not essay to influence the multitudes. He exerted it over the individual in the conduct of his daily life.

He was successful, as a merchant, through honorable means, and accumulated a large fortune, but his highest success, apparently his highest aim in life, was the development of an ennobling individual manhood.

He had integrity, but after all integrity is a common attribute of men; he had charity, but charity aboundeth; he had liberality, but we see that in many men. He had walked upon a high plane | Mrs. Forbes says there is no doubt as of moral law. Many men, not yet of his type, do likewise. He was kind, San Francisco women; that he often courteous, considerate, in social and business life, and assumed willingly his share of public undertakings. These qualities, too, are possessed not infrequently by other men. Strong, resolute, just, with a conservative temperament and high business capacity, he was not in this distinguished over many others. But back of these qualities of outward conduct and character, there was an individualism in the man which impressed every one coming in contact with him with the spirit of a an innocent man. If I can help to high-minded and resolute Christian prove your innocence, command me." force within. I can conceive of a character possessing integrity, honesty, uprightness, doing equal and exact justice in all things, as I can conceive a beautiful statue, symetrical in its outlines and chiseled in aesthetic mould, but presenting to us a feeling of coldness. Something is wanting.

Cast upon the statue of cold marble the ray of an afternoon sunset. It will glow with the suffusion of golden light and entrance the observer with its soft and radiant beauty.

The character of the deceased might have possessed all the virtues of which we have spoken. It would not have been the character we today revere. It would have been the cold statue of exact virtue. Something would have been wanting. It is this something that enveloped the character of our dead and loved friend and relieved it from the cold austerity of exact virtues. If it were not that these virtues were enveloped and suffused with the glow of a Christian spirit, which speaking from within radiated from his presence, contact and intercourse, a golden suffusion of interest, kindliness and sympathy for his fellow man, we would have admired and respected rather than loved and revered his life—his influence among us. It is not the admiration that the public pays to a great man who has occupied great positions and rendered great public services with which this community today has paid fts respect to his memory. It is a sentiment nearer and tenderer than admiration. It is the appreciation lovingly paid to one whose universal kindness has been experienced and recognized in this community over a long period of years. And it seems me, sir, that there is something peculiarly beautiful in the manner in which his last closing years have passed and with which the announcement of his death has been re-

There has been no fulsome praise of his virtues. Virtue needs it not. There has been no excess of adjectives by speakers or writers in referring to his fellow man, felt and sympathized with him, has ended his earthly life and we pause to reflect and contemplate his life and work. They need it not. But sent out from Buffalo that there was a there is a feeling pervading this community, a feeling of reverence—of loss, a feeling that one, who lived with his bright and noble example. We recognize rather than applaud the merit of his life and character. In this, there is paid to his memory a beautiful tribute by a community in which he has exerted a strong, wholesome exemplary and influence over the period of more than a half century of the earthly life vouchsafed to him.

In a sketch of Mr. Worth, the North Carolina Presbyterian of this week

A Disastrous Incendiary Fire

Pensacola, Fla., November 25.-About $100,000 worth of property was burned this morning by fire that was started by an incendiary in the old compress building, which was used by several firms as a warehouse for the storage of hay and feed stuffs. The fire spread from this building to the Clubbs lumber yard, the old freight house of the Louisville and Nashville railroad and the company's new freight house. The latter was filled with merchandise. The contents of both freight depots were destroyed.

AN EXPENSIVE CAMPAIGN

HANNA SPENDS $50,000 ON THE OHIO ELECTION

His Subscription to the Committee of $15,-000-Nearly Half of Which Said to Have Come from Republican National Committee-Under the Law Mr. Hanna Did Not Have to Limit His Personal Expenses. The Debts of the State Committee

(Special to The Washington Post.) Columbus, Ohio, November 24.-The charge is made here today that of the $15,000 supposed to have been paid by Senator Hanna to the republican state committee in the late campaign, but $9.000 was his personal funds, the $6,000 being furnished by the republican national committee. An evening paper

"According to the summary of the report of the committee, which was prepared for the use of the press by Secretary John R. Malloy, Mr. Hanna is credited with the payment of $15,000. But the most careful search of the report itself fails to disclose such an amount credited to Mr. Hanna personally. Major Dick, however, is credited with two checks. The first is for $1,000 and is the second or third amount received by the committee after it opened quarters for business. The second check received from Major Dick was for $5,000, toward the latter part of the tribune were blocked, doors having campaign. Mr. Hanna is personally charged with but $9,000, in two amounts one of $4,000 and the other of $5,000. Evidently, therefore, the $6,000 which is credited to Major Dick is really intended as a credit to Mr. Hanna.

"Now the question arises where did that money come from? Major Dick's habits with the check book are well known. He has given out checks in this city before, all of which were made payable on a national bank of Washington, D. C. It is said that the two checks made payable to the committee were also drawn upon this bank. This bank is the custodian of the funds of the national republican executive comtion of the German opposition, then mitte, of which Major Dick is secretary and Mr. Hanna chairman. It was upon this money that Major Dick drew his other checks. It is charged that the two checks paid to the committee were

The two notes for $10,000 each, which the republican state executive committee owes on the expenses of their state campaign, are variously regarded among the republicans. There are none who do not realize that Senator Hanna will take care of them when he gets ready. Probably he will not get ready until after his election as senator is assured. When asked about the matter the republicans at state headquarters only remark that there will be no trouble about these notes. Nobody thinks for a moment that the other faction of the republican party will pay all, or any part of them. It is well known among the leaders that Governor Bushnell's contribution to the committee is limited by law. This accounts for his contributing only $500 this year, when it is pretty well understood that his first election cost him about $30,000. The Garfield law was not plained that Senator Hanna, not being a candidate before the people, is not limited in his political expenses.
